Vienna Journal and President Wilson.

Amsterdam, March 5.-The violent contrasts in regard for President Wilson offered by the "Neue Freie Presse" of Vienna during the past month make amusing reading. On February 4 the journal saw in Mr. Wilson the ideal man of peace. His one idea was to terminate the horrors of war. "Mr. Wilson," said the paper, "speaks as an emissary of Humanity; he cannot rally to the side of England, whose policy is in exact opposition to the words and sentiments of the President."

That was on the eve of the rupture of negotiations with Germany. Observe how in twenty-four hours all this honey had turned to vinegar :- "President Wilson has dropped the ma-k and appears in his true colours. We now know on which side he is and who are his friends. His reply to the German declaration is the recall of his Ambassador from Berlin and the handing of passports to Count Bernstouff. Nobody believed for a moment that he was sincere in his, remonstrances to England." Furiously indiguant, the journal goes on to declare that it knew all along that the President was a mere tool in the hands of the Entente and that to help England has always been his first

On the following day, February 6, the "Neue Freie Presse" scoffed at the idea of American intervention. What can America do? She cannot invade Transylvania like the Rumanians, force the passage of the Dwina as the Serbians did, or bombard Cattaro like the Montenegrins. America is too far off to affect the course of the war at all.

On February 7 the same paper has a better idea. American intervention can only prove a "sheer loss" to the Entente: for instead of using Am-rica as an arsenal the United States Government will seize all the output of armament firms for itself. Various other inconveniences for the Entente are cited and the journal concludes :- "To sum up, America's intervention will will only be a hindrance to Allied plans, while for us it will prove a great Terror in Constantinople.

According to the account of a resident in the Turkish capital, published in the Telegraaf, life in Constantinople is almost unendurable. There is no coal and hardly any food. The Germans have introduced a card system for the latter, but have requisitioned all available provisions for their own countrymen. Even the rich are living

Meanwhile the people are kept in subjection by terror. Spies are everywhere; one dare not even trust intimate friends. People disappear and are not heard of again; their friends do not dare to inquire, lest they, too, are

The Turkish Navy no longer exists, and what is left of the merchant fleet is not worth mentioning. The few ships that are left—German, Austrian and Turkish—dare not leave the harbour. The "Goeben" is still in dock with a large hole in her hull. German Soldiers Starving.

Nine soldiers, leserters from the German army, recently crossed the frontier near Heille. Their military note-book showed that they had re-ceived no pay since December 19. They had been sent to the frontier from the trenches, but received so little nourishment that they were driven by sheer hunger to try their luck in Hol-

They declare that all hope of a vicorious issue to the war has vanished from the minds of the soldiers. A speedy end was predicted by their officers after the occupation of Poland, of Serbia, and then of Rumania. They have now lost hope. An army order shown by these deserters is significant. It warns the soldiers that if they desert into Holland they will be interned, even if they enter Dutch territory in civilian clothes, and that after the war they will be surrendered to German justice. All of which is, of course, absolutely untrue. Holland's Dilemma.

If popular expression is any criterion one would say that there is no nation which hates the German more violently to-day than the Hollander. Vindictiveness is intensified by the cruel knowledge of helplessness. The "Mop" is massed in his tens of thousands over the border, and the military scrength of Holland is not what it ought to be. It is often said in desperation that the Dutch dare not make a move to improve matters. It has been suggested that a system of trenches should be begun on the frontier. But then comes the fear that at the first sign of preparation the Germans will be pouring over the border. The great outrage of the sinking of the seven liners is, strangely enough, hardly ever discussed. The shame of it is intolerable. The average Hollander contents himself with dwelling on minor insults, such as the refusal of Germany to carry out her promise to supply coal after having on the strength that promise received butter, cheese, milk and other produce from Holland. Dutch smugglers, who, notwithstanding all the enmity displayed by the Germans, are still supplying them with goods, are denounced as Turmoil in Germany. Widespread Strikes and Disturbances.

Amsterdam, April 21.—The Handelsblad reports that 600 German fusiliers, sailors and Landsturm men deserted and tried to cross the Belgo-Dutch frontier; 200 Uhlans were sent in pursuit and attacked the deserters with machine-guns. The fight lasted half an hour and thirty were wounded. Eight slightly wounded men succeeded in reaching Dutch soil.

Zurieh, April 21.—The Socialist newspaper Volksreht says that strikes and disturbances are general in Germany, notably in Berlin and Hamburg and on the Westphalian coalfields.

Amsterdam, April 21.—The Duesseldorfer Anzeiger says that at a meeting of Berlin strikers the leaders submitted resolutions demanding from the Government a declaration of immediate readiness for peace on the basis of the renunciation of annexations: also the immediate abolition of compulsory service, a law for the liberation of political prisoners, complete political freedom, and universal secret franchise. The resolutions were defeated by a majority that is not stated.

Amsterdam, April 21.-According to the Lokal Anzeiger, the Chanc-llor refused to listen to a deputation of Berlin strikers, who decided not to resume work. Hindenburg has written to Groener (the Labour Minister) denouncing the strike of munition workers. He says that the increased meat ration and regular supply of potatoes sufficiently compensate for the reduction of the bread ration. In view of the seriousness of the times, he cannot understand why the question of the feeding should cause a strike. Any diminution in the production of war material cannot be extenuated: it is a crime towards the men fighting on the western front. He asks Groener to explain the position to the workers.

Oldenzaal says that the most serious riot in Germany during the war occurred at Magdeburg owing to the reduction of the bread ration. Ten thousand strikers, mostly munition workers, tried to set fire to the Town Hall. Troops fired on them. killing and wounding many. The disturbances continue and the town is in a state of [The following is the third section of a message the first and second sections of which are not yet to hand.] especially railway and guns, and rely on Hindenburg's boasted strategical reserve to gain victory. However, the extraordinary rapidity of the Allied advance has clearly disarranged the enemy plans, and the appearance of many new German divisions and the crowding of his first-line trenches indicate that the reserve is already being used up.

Meanwhile, internal troubles are more and more occupying the German press. The semi-official Berlin telegram announcing the termination of the great strike of munition workers in Berlin on Monday was now admitted to have been premature.

The Lokal Anzeiger states that a quarter of a million workers at five factories were still on strike on Wedneeday. Vorwaerts states that a meeting of strikers on Thursday resolved not to resume, but to send a deputation to the Chancellor.

The Cologne Gazette states that various strikes occurred in Leipzig on Monday and Tuesday; also a great demonstration at Stoetleritz in protest against the scarcity of food.

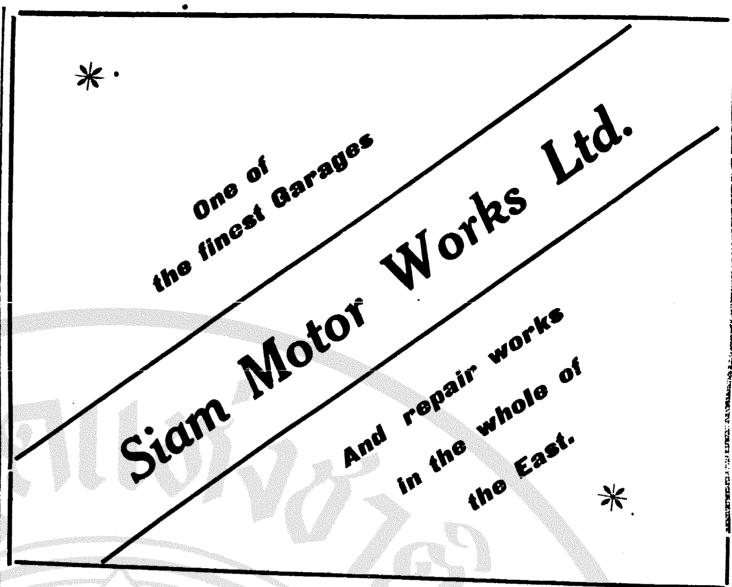

Entry of U. S. Celebrated in London.

London, April 20.—To-day was "America day" in London and the British and American flags were everywhere entwined. The formal celebration service at St. Paul's was crowded. The King and Queen sat under the dome, members and ex-members of the Cabinet, diplomatists and High Commissioners behind them. The service opened with the singing of "O! God our help," then prayers were said and thanks offered for entry of the United States, and prayers for the victory of the Allies and a lasting peace, after which the battle hymn of the Republic was sung to the tune of John Brown's Body.'

The American Bishop of the Philippines preached an eloquent sermon on righteousness, and said that the Allies were fighting for the great commonwealth of mankind, adding: "Our war is to destroy war." After the singing of "Through the night of doubt and sorrow," Anglo-American hymns were played. Ottawa, April 20.—In the House of Commons, Sir George Foster paid a tribute to the United States in joining the Allies. He said that the entry was the result of America's conviction that the Allies were morally in the right.

Sir W. Laurier said that the entry of the United States vindicated the principle that any nation that pretends to be civilized must side with the Allies ; that there is a solidarity among all nations that the law of 'might is right' cannot for ever go unchallenge

LITERARY LICENCE.

Of late years there has been an unpleasant tendency in English fiction towards the suggestive -and even almost the pornographic. This is very regrettable, and much to be deprecated. Formerly the pride and glory of the literature of England was its consistently high tone, and it would be a great pity if the standard were lowered. The Loudon Punch, for instance, has always been an outstanding example of the possibility of dissociating wit and humour from vulgarity or impropriety. The canker has not as vet spread very far, but sufficiently so to make itself quite apparent. The "fleshly school" has grown to considerable dimensions since its birth in the latter part of the last century, when it received the support of a number of undoubtedly brilliant writers, such as the contributors to the "Yellow Book." ment was a reaction against the mawkish sentimentality which had characterised most of the inferior productions of fiction-writers for a long period beforehand, and to a certain extent the revolt was justified. It was the unnatural and pharisaic tone of early and mid-Victorian novelists which, probably more than anything else, earned that reputation for hypocrisy which was at one time universally accorded to the English on the Continent of Europe. No one, we should imagine, desires the return of the School of Cant. The School of the Flesh, however, is even more pernicious. It is not even honest pornography, but pauders to vitiated appetites under the guise of a smirking imitation of morality. Beneath the mask of the preacher one perceives the leering face of the satyr. To enforce the truth of this there is no need to mention any particular names-they are too well known. These writers invariably give one the impression that they would like to expatiate very much more on their theme, and are only restrained from doing so by a disinellnation to incur the penalties of the law. Downright pornography has existed ever since the invention of writing, and will continue to exist so long as human nature remains as it is. But there is this to be said in regard to it-at any rate in these days. In actual practice it is almost entirely confined to certain circles, made up of those individuals who have a taste for it - individuals who are well acquainted with the lurid side of life and have little to learn from the most highly-coloured effusions of the pornographist. But the case is quite different with the problem-writers and pseudo-moralists of to-day. Their works are advertised and reviewed in popular journals and magazines, and are displayed in prominence on every bookstall and in the windows and on the counters of every bookshop. Only very seldom are they rejected by the committees of public libraries. Consequently nothing intervenes to prevent them from getting into the hands of the young. The rising beneration is a large consumer of fiction, and is naturally undiscriminating. Such books as those of which we are speaking are open to them freely, and much harm results. These books, while innocuous enough to the adult and despised by all persons of taste, are injurious to youth in the highest degree, and those writers who are responsible for instilling the poison of corruption into the minds of ingenuous boys and girls are deserving of the severest reprobation. All rightthinking individuals will be on the side of the angels in this matter, and will hope to see these pseudo-literary contaminators of the young placed under such restrictions that their worst and most baneful influence shall be removed. The pen can be deadlier than the sword. The sword can deal death, but to the pen is given the possibility of destroying the promise of life by its power to taint the youthful mind.

There is a rumour that the steamers Kuala and Katong now in port are being boycotted by Chinese rice shippers. This appears to be done at the instance of the Singapore Chinese Merchants' Guild. The reason for this step is said to be the refusal on the part of the owners, the Straits Steamship Co., to pay the value of damaged cargo.

These victories of our joint armies, I am certain, are an earnest of further steady progress."

Spain's Neutrality

London, April 20.-Count Romanones has resigned because he is convinced that the submarine war is so hurtful to the life of the nation that the continued neutrality of Spain may become impossible, but he finds a large section of Spanish opinion, even Liberal opinion, unwilling to follow him. The new Cabinet is Liberal but strongly neutral.

Humanities of the War.

A ticket which can be punched twelve times is now issued by the L. B. & S. C. Railway. When the whole of it is gone, you presumably give up Anybody who doubts the energy of the troops in Mesopotamia will surely be utterly confounded by the news, which is taken from an advertisement in the Basrah Times, that it is proposed to start a football league. And this with the hot weather coming on!

French soldiers have just had their daily pay increased from 24d, to 10d. (one franc). At the beginning of the war it was the lowest in Europe, being at the rate of only one halfpenny a day. It was a merely nominal sum, supplemented by grante from home, and was paid every five days, 21d. at alternate times, and a penny and a three half-penny packet of tobacco at others. It was in October, 1915, that the poiln's pay was raised by statute to 21d.

After a tour through Switzerland under the personal direction of Richard Strauss, the members of the famous Mannheim Orchestra have just attempted to carry home in their instruments a quantity of foodstuffs, Swiss Customs officials at Basle, suspecting the ruse, examined all the couble basses, 'cellos, and trombones, and found concealed sausages, meat, flour, and fats. The food has been confiscated and the musicians fined.

Mr. Ben Trovato tells this story. They were discussing the prospects of peace, when women and children would be allowed to travel in peace and family reunions would be possible. "When do you think, dear, the war will end?' was the question of one sweet creature to another in some way connected with hill-top dwellings. "So sorry, but I am not allowed to tell you that."

A young woman porter stole three cheques, according to a police court report in London. She succeeded in cashing two of the cheques at the Bank, the woman cashier not noticing that they were crossed. When she went to the bank a third time the cashier recognised the hat she was wearing and caused her to be detained! Now how many of our brainy male clerks would have thought of noticing that? They waste their time looking to see if the cheques are crossed.

Riga is one of the few Russian words in our day-to-day war gazetteer which does not lend itself to puzzling spelling variations, but it is more often than not mispronounced. That well-known limerick chronicling the sad fate of a young lady who "went for a ride on a tigah," has decided the pronunciation of Riga for most people, and it is only the merest man in the street who takes a running kick at the word and pro-nounces it "Rigga," which is, of course, the correct pronunciation.

A very improper subject for amusement occurred in Bada Pesth the other day. The Food Dictator lives at the Bristol Hotel and was at dinner with some friends and ordered his portion. When the waiter asked for his bread ticket, the Baron searched his pocket and found none. The waiter refused to accept a ticket offered by his friend, as the transfer of the bread ticket is distinctly forbidden. But it was not etiquette to laugh at the incident. Soldiere are not permitted to laugh when their ('. O. tumbles into a wet ditch.

Professor Pollard, in a lecture at the University College mentioned that in his address two weeks ago he advanced certain forecasts, which were "blue-pencilled" by the Censor.

The statements, however, had since been justified by facts. He happened to know several of the censors, and they were really quite intelligent people outside the Censor's office. In their office they were subject to all sorts of orders, but blue pencils and red tape were fatal to any rational being.

They have a gentleman in the French Censor's office who really should be in-troduced to the cheerful idiot over here who struck out the line "The captains and the Kings depart." M. Joseph Reinach wrote of President Wilson, "Scholar as he is, Mr. Wilson will" writing the word "scholar" in English. The censor suspected an insult that might have dangerous consequences, and crossed out the word "scholar," and the sentence appeared in the "Figaro" thus: " as he is." We could hardly beat that at White-

Despite their professed faith in their superiority, Germans are nevertheless superstitions, says the Liberte. The Crown Prince would refuse to travel in an antomobile unless a horseshoe, which he himself picked up at the beginning of the war, be nailed to one of the doors. Among the troops there are various forms of superstition. Wurtemberg soldiers, for instance, wear a locket round their necks containing pollen grain, which they believe protects them against wounds, while the Saxon superstition is that invincibility is ensured by sewing the wings of a bat on the lining of the coat. Bavarian soldiers go to the extent of cutting Shipyards v. Submarines.

London, 'April 29 .- The Shipping Controller announces that the output of steamers of over a hundred tons in the six months ending December was less than the estimate, but the output in March exceeded it, being at a rate of over a million tone per annum. No ship of 14,000 tons has been ordered : the policy is being carried out of building seven ships of 2,000 tons each instead of one of 14,000. Three types of standard ships have been contracted for and are approximately of 5,000, 3,000 and 2,000 tons respectively.

Lord Curzon on Allied Victory.

London, April 21.-Lord Curzon, speaking at Derby, said that the military position at present was destinctly encouraging. He did not wish them to run away with the idea that the end would come just yet, but there was no doubt that the operations in France during the last fortnight were a considerable military victory and had shown the wonderful superiority of our artillery, which had fired four million rounds against the enemy.

Lord Curzou added - "Keep your eye on Mesopotamia." He declared that the military power of Germany was not yet sufficiently broken to induce her to accept the terms considered reasonable by the Allies.

New Educational Era.

London, April 20.—Professor Fisher (Minister for Education) scored a triumph in the House of Commons, his proposals being unanimously approved, inaugurating what is described as a new educational ora. The bulk of the increase in the estimater is due to an increase in teachers'

The proposals include the raising of school age to fourteen years, the deve-lopment of agricultural education in village schools, liberal scholarships and maintenance grants for poor scholars in secondary schools and Universities, the reducation of multiplicity of examinations, and national physical train-

Austria Cutting Loose?

Amsterdam, April 30.—It transpires that the political crisis in Austria was coupled with several Ministerial resignations. Although it was of domes-tic origin, it caused considerable perturbation in Germany. It appears that the Emperor Charles refured to entertain proposals of the Austro-German parties to issue a decree making German the official State language and dividing Bohemia into language zones, ore of which was to be purely German. The Emperor preferred to submit these measures to the Reichsrath, which meets next month for the first time since the war began, instead of enacting them by decree. German parties in Austria are much upset, while the newspapers of Germany are filled with forebodings of Austria's falling away from German grace.

Battle for Laon.

London, April 20.-Reuter's correspondent at French headquarters says that the French are entirely satisfied with the results of the new offensive up to the present. The capture of the Ostel-Courtecon line is of first-rate importance, those places being enormously strong positions. A compulsory retirement imperils the very powerfully organised line from Vanxaillon to Preetbeconde. The capture of Nanteuil la Fosse threatens the centre of the enemy defence system. The whole of the enemy line facing west is threatened from the rear by the capture of Vailly and the advance beyond

London, April 20.-The latest French communique shows that the French have extinguished the salient southwest of Laon, conquered the platean, and from Jony and Aizy, its highest points, have a commanding observation over Chemin des Dames, the great road running from Laffaux west to Craonne. To the cast the country from the road slopes downward to Laon, whose citadel rises abruptly 500 feet from the plain. West of Laon is the powerful fort of Laniscourt protecting the outlet from the huge obstacle of St. Gobain forest. As there has been no recent reports of fighting at Coucy and other points fronting St. Gobain, it would appear that the French are engaged in the movement between Laffaux and Craonne designed to turn St. Gobain.

Paris, April 20.—General Alexeiff, the Russian Commander-in-Chief, has telegraphed to General Nivelle the Russian army's joy on learning of the magnificent French successes and its ardent wish that the efforts in which the Russian army is resolved to participate at the earliest moment will be crowned with final triumph.

General Nivelle replied, congratulating Alexeiff on his definite appointment as Commander-in-Chief. He says that the French army rejoices to learn that the Russian army will soon join in the efforts against the common Russian Position.

Petrograd, April 20.—The General Staff communicates that the Germans are concentrating naval and military forces on the northern front. Numerous transports including river steamers have assembled at Baltic Ports. A portion of the German fleet has left Kiel for Danzig, whence it has proceeded to Libau. The opinion is expressed that the Germans are contemplating a descent at the rear of the Russian right flank in the neighbourhood of the Gulf of Finland, threatening Petrograd.

New York, April 19.—The Associated Press states that assurances have reached Washington that under no conditions at present conceivable will the provisional Government of Rossia yield to the overtures of Austro-German socialists for a separate peace. It is authoritatively learned that so far from contemplating any peace on the basis of existing governments, the advanced socialists of Russia want to carry their democratising ideas into the Central Empires and appeal to the Austro-German socialists to revolt and overthrow their monarchies and establish socialistic republics instead.

Petrograd, April 19.—The speeches at the Government reception to the Anglo-French labour delegates all emphasised that the Allied democracies were fighting for liberty and the elimination of war.

M. Miliukoff declared the provisional Government would continue to exert its utmost efforts to annihilate German militarism.

That this view is overwhelmingly endorsed by the people is shown by the general condemnation of speeches in favour of peace by a few former exiles, whose journey to Russia was greatly facilitated by the German authorities. All the newspapers refer to them as in the pay of the Kaiser.

Petrograd, April 14.—The statement

Petrograd, April 14.—The statement of the correspondent of the Times at Petrograd regarding foreign relations cabled on April 11 is semi-officially denied. It is declared the executive of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Committee merely informed the Government it had established an information bureau for the purpose of keeping the foreign socialist press informed regarding events in Russia.

Berlin's Battle News.

London, April 20.—Wireless. German Official: Firing activity increases daily in the Arras battlefield. The occupation of the fortified zone of Siegfried Hindenburg positions, which have been long under construction, began on March 16 and terminated yesterday by the abandonment of the Aisne bank between Conde and Soupir. The enemy follows hesitatingly. The double battle on the Aisne and in Champagne continues normally.

There is strong artillery fire on Chemin des Dames ridge. Serong French attacks near Braye and Cerny on both sides of Craonne failed.

The French yesterday renewed their attempt to outflank the Brimont position. French storming waves on the Aisne—Marne canal five times broke down sanguinarily. We are masters of the situation there.

There was a fighting all day in Champagne in the wooded region between the Thuizy-Nauroy road and Auberive, which latter we voluntarily evacuated. Our counter-attack pressed back the enemy. We reached our objective. Thus the second French attempt to break through in Champagne was frustrated. The French so far have used more than thirty divisions on both battlefields.

The French attempt to recapture the positions lost on April 17 failed, but they gained a footing on one summit.

London, April 21.--Wireless. German Official: The gradual increase of artillery fire between Loos and the Arras Cambrai railway line continues. Troops representing all German peoples are performing heroic deeds hourly under the heaviest fire, faithful in endurance to death, on the mighty battlefields of the Aisne and Champagne. Our thrusting troops yesterday afternoon cleared out the enemy from what was formerly a sugar factory. We repulsed with severe losses the Franco-Russians at Brimont. The French stubbornly attacked near Braye, from the Paissy plain as far as eastward of Craonne, and between Prosnes and Suippes. French attacks on Chemin des Dames and in Champagne broke down under our fire.

A German Denial.

London. April 22.—The German Wireless denies that the bodies of dead soldiers are treated as alleged in the cablegram of the 17th. It says that these newspapers have mistranslated as "human corpses" the German word "cada ver," really meaning the carcases of animals.

The Franco-British Advance.

London, April 20 .- The Grugies, mentioned in the communique, is the southern suburb of St. Quentin. The artillery fire here probably indicates that the French are preparing another blow which will complete the encirclement of St. Quentin, cut the St. Quentin Cambrai railway and threaten the communications of the Bavarian and German Crown Princes' armies.

The stiff fighting on the Laon and Moronvillers plateaux is due to the desperation of the German efforts to avoid being pushed back into the sued were a very fine example of desplains. In their efforts they are recklessly employing masses of men, losing terribly.

Meanwhile the British are not idle. ▲ French correspondent at British head-quarters telegraphs that the British have virtually completed the consolidation of the conquered posi-tions. Having defeated all German counter-attacks, the artillery is now preparing for a fresh advance, naturally co-ordinated with the French plans. The correspondent estimates that nine German divisious have been put out of action as the result of the recent British offensive, losing fifty per cent, of their effectives. Recently the enemy has been noticed to be busily entrenching beyond the Hindenburg line, while the fires and explosions are more numerous in Lens and envi-

The only instance of German chivalry in the war hitherto, namely, in aviation, has vanished, and the Germans are now replacing the iron cross painted on the wings of aeroplanes by a circle enclosing a small cross with a view to deceiving the Allies. Already several mistakes have occurred.

London, April 21.- Reuter's correspondent at headquarters says: A heavy and deliberate bombardment is proceeding, overwhelming artillery being engaged in cutting wire, smashing up trenches and wrecking strong points. There has been a lull as regards big news, but no pause in preparation for creating big news. We have been steadily creeping forward towards St. Quentin, and in the extension of the nutcrackers which at a pre-arranged moment will close with a snap on Lens.

Raid on Dover.

London, April 21.-The Admiralty reports that yesterday night five German destroyers attempted a raid on Dover and fired a number of rounds into a ploughed field a few miles from Dover. The enemy then sheered in the direction of home, possibly with the intention of attacking our shipping. They met two of the Dover Patrol vessels. These vessels in five minutes engaged and sank at least two and possibly three of the enemy destroyers. The remainder fled at high speed, escaping in the darkness. Our vessels had no material damage and the casualties were exceedingly slight in comparison with the results obtained. Our vessels were handled with remarkable gallantry and dash and the tactics purtroyer work.

We succeeded in saving ten German officers and ninety-five men from the sunken vessels.

London, April 21.—The Admiralty states that the Germans saved off Dover were ten officers and 108 men.

Later.-The bodies of thirty Germans from the sunken destroyers were picked up in the Channel by trawlers and landed at Dover. They include several officers. There was some booing by the crowds when the German survivors landed last evening.

Unofficial accounts of the raid state that salvoes of German starshells prelading the bombardment were seen at 12.30 o'clock in the morning. Then there was rapid firing, lasting for ten minutes, all the shells falling within a radius of quarter of a mile, doing not the slightest damage. Silence followed till 1.45 a.m., when firing was heard 20 to 30 miles distant, apparently from bigger guns. Flashes were visible, moving eastwards as the Germans fled. The night was fine but misty.

News of the sinkings was brought by British destroyers later in the morning. Two destroyers reached their home port later in the day and were enthusiastically cheered by the fleet for distinguishing themselves.

Little Victims of the War.

The first party of children from the occupied part of France crossed the Dutch southern frontier ir. February. They are to be Holland's guests for the rest of the war. Five hundred youngsters had been expected, but only 250 actually arrived, boys and girls whose ages ranged from 6 to 14 years. Other parties are expected to follow. A large number of ladies and gentlemen of the Committee in charge of the work met the children at Rossendaal, including Madame Allize, wife of the French Minister, and General H. C. P. L. Mathon, Chairman of the Hague committee.

As the children stepped out of the train, each carrying his or her little bundle of belongings, they presented a pitiful and pathetic picture, and when they related that they had left Lille on Tuesday morning, the compassion of their new friends was even greater.

Having been regaled in the waiting room with a good meal, the children were divided up into groups and taken on to Utrecht, Aruheim, Eindhoven, Egmond, Breda, Den Bosch, &c. A correspondent who was present at the Roosendaal station writes :-As the French children descended from the train we realised the misery of northern France. They made a most prinful impression. The Belgian children looked comparatively well fed as compared with these drawn little faces and lustreless eyes. Many of these faces wore the serious expression of old age clothing was insufficient: hunger and weakness were apparent. They came from Lille, Lens and A:ras. Many had spent months in cellars. They will tell you how mother had to stop up the cracks in windows and doors, and the keyholes as well, to keep out the poison gas. Many have seen the dead bodies of soldiers and civilians. They talk of military funerals as of quite ordinary things, of the arrival of seriously wounded, of bombardments and bomb attacks, so close did a number of these vonnigsters live to the front. There are five little girls in peculiar garb, a big black hat and cape. They came from the orphanage at Avion, near Lens. Mother is dead, father at the front. The orphanage took them in. Every night the inmates slept in the cellar for fear of shells. Holland! It was to them a land of milk and honey. They are now reaping the first fruits. but one shivers to see these children and think of the thousands and then sands who have remained behind in Another 254 French children have arrived at Roosendaal from the neigbourhood of Lille and Tourcoing. Of to harbour.

these children 90 girls and 70 boys were sent on to Egmond-on-Sea, 20 girls to Eindhoven, 10 girls to Haarlem, 20 boys and 10 girls to Amsterdam and 34 girls to Zandvoort. Some poignant details of the distress in the northern part of France are given by the "Telegraaf." In some of the villages right on the firing lineas for instance Cheauvry, Fergnier and Lens—people are still carrying on a hazardous existence. A double danger threaters them-artillery and famine. The cellar is their constant refuge, and often, indeed, their dwelling, while for food and necessaries they are entirely dependent on the activities of the Relief Committe. During the recent cold spell the suffering was acute, very little coal being obtainable, and the unfortunate people were forced to use their furniture for fuel. Their life is one of continual suspense and anxiety, and they have always to be on the 'qui vive." for artillery bombardments and gas attacks. German troops are quartered with the inhabitants or in factories, and Russian prisoners often pass through bound for some scene of labour behind the Somme lines or by Arras or La Bassee. Raids are of frequent occurrence, and villages are often surprised by the sudden appearance of British patrols, which dash in and carry off a number of prisoners. The situation is one of of increasing distress, and the suffering and misery of the people is becoming greater and more unendurable as the months drag by.
