Celtic Wit. Some Irish Stories.

In his book, "Bulls and Blunders," Mr. J. C. Percy gives the following story as a specimen of quick Irish repartee. Lord Morris, the witty Irish judge, was dining with Sir William Harcourt, and mentioned to his host that he had seen a paragraph in the papers stating that a warm private friendship existed between Sir William Harcourt and Mr. Chamberlain. "It is quite true," said Sir Will. " Indeed, you might almost say that we are brothers." "No doubt," said Lord Morfis: "so, if I remember rightly, were Cain and Abel." Here is another story from the same book. "An Irishman was near his end, and a neighbour to console him said, 'Well, we must all die once.' that's my trouble, was the reply It's such dimited number ; if I could die half-a dozen times I should not worry about it." Pat had taken a day off without permission from the factory where he was employed, and it seemed highly probable that he would lose his job in cousequence. "Why didn't you turn up yesterday?" said the foreman stern-"Please, sir," said Pat, "I was so ill I could not come to work to save me life." "How was it then," asked the other, "that during the morning I saw you pass the factory on your bicycle? For a moment Pat was somewhat taken aback, but quickly regained his pre-sence of mind, "Sure, sir," he said, "that must have been when I was going for the doctor." The well-known baritone, Signor Foli, was once singing in grand opera in his native city, Cork, and one of his souge had to be song from a stage balcony. It happened that the stage arrangements were not all that was to be desired, and the stage manager was somewhat fearful that the carpenter not made the balcony strong enough to bear the weight of the singer. Two assistants were told off to hold it up from beneath, but Signor Foli was only half-way through his song when one of them said to the other, "Pat, this Oitalian is mighty heavy." "Yes," agreed the other, "Let's dhrop him; he's only an Oitalian afther all! Quick as lightning the Signor whispered from above, "Will yez, will yez, ye spalpeens?" Both men gave a gasp, "Tare-an-oun's," cried Pat, "but he's an Oirishman!

loife of vez While walking among a quiet country road in Ireland a tourist came upon two men who were rolling about on At Tak the road and fighting desperately. As he saw that the upper man was mercilessly pummelling the other he thought he had better interfere "I say, old chap," he said, "it's not quite playing the game, you know, to hit a man when he's down." The victor paused for a moment in astonishment and looked up. "Faith," he said, "an' if ye knew all the trouble I had getting him down you wouldn't be talkin' like that."

A story has been published lately as a new one of an Irishman who confess. ed to the theft of a goose and, in res ponse to the injunction to return if, begged the priest to accept it. The rascal evades and penalty because he has offered restitution and it has been repeatedly refused and the priest discovers too late that the goose was his own. Sir Henry Manton now writes in the style of "Pair of Spectacles" that "I Pair of Spectacles" that "1 knew that priest," gives his name and that the penitent, says the stolen property was a piece of bacon, and that the trick was played about thirty years ago, when he was in Ireland learning the merita of Home Rule. The cream of the joke that if a modern Joe Miller compiles a book of jests of the Confessional, this story would be entitled to the first place in the story would be entitled to the first place in the story. titled to the first place in the collection. It was told in French with lighter touch quite a century ago, generally with reference to the priest's snuff box; but there is a variation seasoned with Gallic salt too pungent to be translated, and we believe it came to France from Italy, where its origin may go back to the fifteenth century.

Peace Housing Problem.

By the Advisory Committee on the Housing question presided over by Lord Salisbury, whose report to the Missister of Reconstruction in now issued, it is estimated that the total need for new houses in England and Wales at the end of the war—if it ended this year—is 300,000, with the addition of 75,000 for each year the war lasts, Mr. Leslie Scott K,C.M.P., one of the members, puts the figure higher. "Should the war last till 1919, the irreducible minimum for rural districts alone will be nearly 300,000." The cost of these houses is estimated at 30 per cent above pre-war values, involving an expenditure of £100,000, 000 and a grant from the State of £25,000,000, or even more. Every endeavour should be made to ensure, the Committee recommend, that a high standard should be maintained as an example in all feature building.

THE BREAKING-POINT.

In the months of March, April and May of this year the prospects of a German victory seemed bright to German eyes but these hopes have faded till now something very like despair fills the hearts of the German people. Not only have the ablest enemy generals been worsted on the Western front by the superior strategy of Foch but the allies of Germany in other theatres of war have suffered crushing defeats that must exercise a profound influence on the further course of the struggle. Ronter to-day informs the world that the Franco-Serbian troops have penetrated into Bulgarian territory and we know that the Germano-Bulgar troops are retiring in disorder and that they are showing signs of approaching disorganisation. In Palestine the Allied operations have resulted in a débuicle that may result in the Turkish army being placed hors de combat for the rest of the war. A few weeks ago it was estimated that the total remaining effectives of the whole Turkish army did not number more than two hundred thousand men fighting in scattered parts of the Empire and the recent operations in Palestine. counting in captures and casualties, must have reduced that number by nearly fifty per cent.

All these disasters to the enemy lead to the conclusion that we are now entering upon what may be termed the last lap of the war and the question for Germany is not one of achieving victory but of obtaining a peace that shall be as advantageous as possible to herself—in other words one in which the least humiliation shall be inflicted on her.

That even the German army is becoming war-weary is evident from items of news that manage from time to time to reach the outer world in spite of the vigilance of enemy censors. We hear, for instance, of three companies of German machine gunners surrendering without firing a shot and of the General commanding the 234th German Division complaining of the number of men he has to punish for s If-inflicted wounds. While these stories, especially those emanating from priso ers of war, should be accepted with caution there is no doubt that a greal deal of discontent exists in the German army and is responsible for the deterioration of the morale of the enemy forces. It would, indeed, be poetic justice if the system of anti-war propaganda so diligently instilled by Germany into Russia should bring about the demoralisation of Germany's own army. Be this as it may, there is no gainsaying the fact that the German army has been sorely tried and harassed and strained for weeks past almost beyond the limit of endurance and it is within the bounds of possibility that the breaking point may be reached in the near

What the German soldier thinks of the Ersatz tobacco is reflected in a letter in the Tageblatt. The correspondent says he sent a small packet to a brother in the field and received the following letter:—"One more request: For God's sake don't send any more Ersatz tobacco. All the fleas, flies, mice and rats came out of their hiding places when I lit a trial pipe. Most of them fell down dead. We men survived, but only because we clapped on our gas-masks."

THE flag adopted by the " Provisional Government of Siberia," established at Vladivostok, consists of two stripes, one white and one green, "the former representing the snow covering the vast plains, the latter the verdure of the immense forests." I do not think any other national flag is so designedly pictorial, writes a contributer in The Observer, (unless the green of the Irish flag is intended to symbolise the verdure of that distressful constry). The colours in each case either date back to prehistoric shields and banners, or represent the taste in decoration of some committee sitting for the purpose. At all events, the simplicity of the Siberian ensign will not arouse political emotions, like the Italian tricolour, or religious prejudice, like the Red Cross of St. George which the New England Puritans objected to as savonring of idolatry.

General Meeting.

The annual General Meeting of the Royal Bangkok Sports Club was held at the Club House last evening at 6 o'clock. There was a fair attendance of members, about 75 being present. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the Chairman Mr. A. E. Stiven addressed the meeting. The Balance Sheet and working account for the year ending 30th June 1918, now before the members showed, he thought, very satisfactory state of affairs-much better than most people expected after the floods of last year. The future p bspects of the Club were however, n so rosy, owing to the pessibilit would not say total stoppage of racing, but a bad season. The many of of racing however, was engaging the serious attention of the Committee, but he regretted that this was all the information he could give on the subject at present. The Chairman felt he could not conclude his speech without referring to the resignation of the Club's President, Mr. J. Caulfeild Janes. Mr. James had been President for 12 or 13 years during which time he had done an enormous amount of work for the Club, and Mr. Stiven thought that if it were possible a monument should be erected in Bangkok to Mr. James. Mr. Stiven then asked for someone to propose and second the adoption of the Balance Sheet after which questions and criticisims would be in order. Mr. Selley proposed and Mr. Chapman seconded that the Balance Sheet be adopted. This was carried nem. con.

The Chairman then read a letter from Mr. Caulfeild James resigning the Presidency of the Club. On a motion by Mr. Brighouse seconded by Mr. Pollard, Mr. James was re-elected President of the Club. The Chairman said that Mr. James had definitely stated that he did not wish to serve on the Committee.

The Ballot for the Committee was then proceeded with and the following were elected :- Messrs Stiven, Wilson, Paludan Muller, Gollo, Grut, Sutton, Wyon Smith, Nunn, Cooke-Collie, and Jenkins.

Mr. A. H. Donaldson was re-elected Auditor at the same fee as in past

The Chairman then read a proposal by Mr. Malcolm seconded by Mr. Jenkins that no subject of Germany or Austria, or of any allies of Germany may become an ally of Germany or Austria be eligible for election as member or honorary member of the Royal Bangkok Sports Club. Mr. Tatner said the motion was quite out of order, as notice of alteration of rules must be given at least a fortnight before an Extraordinary General Meeting to be called for that purpose. The Chairman said that the Committee wished to know the feeling of the meeting on the subject but an Extraordinary General Meeting would have to be called to confirm any decision the Meeting might come to. Mr. E. S. Smith considered the proposal a piece rnbbish and hoped that everybody present would vote against it. After further futile discussion the proposal was put to the meeting and carried. Mr. Leatherbarrow drew attention to the presence of Mr. J. B. C. Lyons at the meeting. He asked if Mr. Lyons was still a member, and if so why. No answer was given. Mr. Lyons then rose to his feet but our reporter was mable to hear what he said owing various rumbling noises throughout the room, The Chairman was understood to say that the Committee would deal with the matter A vote of thanks to the Chairman terminated the meet-

The following are a few interesting notes on the places named in to-day's telegrams :-

Ishtib :-- Anciently known as Asti bon, lshtib is a town in Macedonia in the vilayet of Kossovo, 45 miles southeast of Uskub. It has a population of about ten thousand and is built on a hill at the confluence of two tributaries of the Vardar. Before the war it did a thriving agricultural trade and it possesses several mosques and a fine bazaar as well as the ruins of an old Lake or Sea of Tiberias: -This is identical with the Sea of Galilee of the Scriptures, its Arabic name being Bahr Tubariya. It has an area of about 64 sq. m. and is nearly 700 ft. below sea-level. The district in which it is situated contains hot springs and other evidences of volcanic action. Round its shores are the rnins of several ancient towns many of which are mentioned in the Scriptures.

Awful Disorder In Unhappy Country.

Lady Muriel Paget, after a short rest in the country recuperating after her long journey across Siberia and America, is back in town again, and at the West End house of her hostess, Mrs. Walter Long, gave a correspondent in the Evening Standard, an account of some of her experiences.

Lady Murial, who is the head of the Anglo-Russian Hospital Association, whose work behind the dines on the Eastern front carefully is world re-nowned, wan back to Russia last June, home in which she organ-Russian Exhibition and Conne at the Grafton Galleries. en I gop back to Russia," she I found everything is terrible said, orpital the orderlies were having completee meetings to cettle what to do with the patients, and the patients were having three tings to settle what they would do with the orderlies.

"There was upset everywhere. Robbery and violence were rife. Here is the kind of thing what was going on. ▲ man I knew was in a trans and saw another man being robbed. They got hold of the thief, and when they reached a bridge, the tram stopped, and and they pitched the man into river. The people, you see, were trying to keep order themselves. This was what was happening after the second revolu-

Despite all the rioting and disorder, Lady Muriel says that everybody in Russia has been kind to her and her party. All parties have treated her well. "We have never met with any rudeness, from any of them.

Friendly Towards English.

"You have only to say you are English and you are quite safe. But not otherwise. Rob you in the street? Why, yes, of course. They would take your clothes, your boots, anything they wanted. Anybody with money was fair game. If your coat was fancied, they stripped it from you. They took one man's coat off him, and he com-plained that it was cold. One of the ruffians said, 'Well, I will give you my coat.' Amid jeers he was invested in the ragged old coat and went off in it. But when he got home he found 600 roubles in the lining of the pockets, which the thief had forgotton.

"The Bolshevists." Lady Muriel

confirms, "form the minority of the Social Revolutionary Party. The leaders are Jews. They are anti-Ally, pacifist. and defeatist. Kerensky was openly afraid of them, and neither he nor any the Revolutionary Governments took any determined steps to suppress

"Through organised Bolshevism Germany has almost got Russia in her grip, but she may still survive as a nation with the help of the Allies. Even without that help," Lady Muriel thinks, "she may pull herself together. "The masses are now disillusioned with the Bolshevist programme, and are cronching under the tyranny and plunder of that regime.

"A very attractive programme of land promises and so forth was put up as a bait by the Germans. Two main elements have been at a work upon the minds of the people: Revolution, which means freedom; war, which means discipline.

"The whole turmoil, however, is not the fault of the Russian people it is the fault of the 200,000 at the top. "As regards this country, we ought to give Russia economic help as much as possible, as well as military.

Russian Amazons.

The conversation drifted to America Lady Muriel spoke very highly of Commander Batchkereva, who commanded the "Battalion of Death."

It may, perhaps, be remembered that this peasant woman was at the beginning of the war, by the Czar's permission, allowed to go with her husband's regiment as a common soldier. When her husband was killed she took command, and afterwards started the woman's "Battalion of Death," leading the battalion herself. Some men's regiments followed her, and she took some 2,000 prisoners.

She was sent to the south with despatches, and the Bolshevist took her and her officers, and were about to shoot her. A common soldier stepped forward. "You will have to shoot her through me," he cried, for when I was lying in No Man's Land she came out and brought to me in."

Eventually she was let out of prison because it was contented that she held no proper commission.

"Now," said Lady Paget, "Commander Batchkereva is in America and is speaking there, and urging help. She has come to tell them that the people of Russia are tired of the Bolshevist, and she wants to go back to the Siberian peasants and tell them that the Allies will give them hope. She affirms that there are invitations to-day from all parties in Russia except the Bolshevists." Lady Murrel thinks highly of the Czechs, and speaks with enthusiasin of Czech regiments volunteering to leave the country to fight Germans in France. penetration into the country, she be-

Lady Muriel was in Kieff during the Bolshevists took the town, after firing 10,000 shells into it, and killed 2,600 officers in the first three days.

"The Germans came into Kieff just after we left, on February 22. They were shooting the Russians who refused to put on German uniform and fight for them.

"Wheat in the Ukraine? There is plenty of wheat, but the peasants have not been giving it up as they were required to do by the Germans.

Constantinople in #914

Following the example of Mr. Gerard and Mr. Whitlock, Mr. Strenthau, formerly American Constant ino-ple, continues in the World's Work his outspoken narrative of events in Constantinople after August 4, 1914. His story has still barely arrived at the of war. Insamuch, however, as it gives detailed and independent confirmation of the British account of Turkey's betrayal, the instalments of the narrative already published are of great value. In their statement of the causes leading up to the state of war between England and Turkey the British Government asserted that the German military elements had done their utmost to force Turkey into war. Mr. Morgenthau throws new light on the thoroughness with which this policy was pursued. "As soon," he writes "as the German armies crossed the Rhine, work was begun on a mammoth wireless station outside Constantinople. The material came from Germany by way of Rumania; the mechanics working from daybreak to sunset were unmistakably Germans. Although technically this huge work was constructed for the Sultan on his private property, the German Ambassador always spoke of it to Mr. Morgenthau "as our wireless" and boasted that it would put him-not the Sultan-in direct com-munication with Berlin. During the same period "German officers," according to the American diplomatist, "were almost as active as the Turks themselves in the mobilisation of the Turkish army three months before Turkey declared war." German officers were rushing through the streets every day in automobiles requisitioned from the civilian population, and were celebrating their joy with champagne similarly requisitioned. "A particularly spectacular and noisy figure," adds Mr. Pasha (the German General). He was constantly making a kind of vice-regal "The Czechs prove the possibility of progress through the streets in a huge and madly dashing automobile, on both sides of which German eagles were painted. A trumpeter on the the bombardment in February. The front seat blew loud, defiant blasts as the conveyance rushed along." It is, however, improbable that Germany would have succeeded in her wooing of Turkey but for two facts the commandeering of the two Dreadnoughts building for Turkey in British shipyards and the astute fashion in which Baron Wangenheim, the German Ambaseador in Constantinople, linked this fact with the presence of the Gocben and Breslau in the Mediterranean and turned both to Germany's advantage. The intimate connection between the two occurrences has never before been brought out. The commandeering of the two Dreadnoughts—of which Mr. Morgenthau says: "There is not the slightest question that England had not only a legal but a moral right to do this"—caused bits allowed the things of the state o Turkey.. These ships were to be the agency through which Turkey was loattack Greece and win back the last islands in the Ægean. The money to pay for the vessels had been collected by house-to-house collections. The vessels thus represented "a spectacular outburst of patriotism that was unusual in Turkey" and their date at which relations between Great land's action was easily turned to Britain and Turkey entered on a state account by the German schemers. country's deprivation of them by Eng-Hatred of England was fomented by this means and at the same time you Wangenheim offered to make good this loss by selling-in other words, presenting-to Turkey the Goeben and Breslau, which, in other circumstances, would certainly have undergone destruction at the hands of the British fleet. This sale or gift, which the British Admiral in the Mediterranean could not, and did not, foresee, rendered technically correct the passage of the vessels through the Narrows. The was an extremely clever one, and Mr. Morgenthau admits that the arrival of the ships was the greatest day in the diplomatic career of von Wangenheim. Nevertheless, the plot, with its palpable insincerities, deceived no one. The German crews never left the vessels, Wangenheim continued to refer to them as German ships, and in Berlin the Greek Minister was told semi-officially that the transfer was fancied rather than real. Mr. Morgenthau, who often wonders what would have happened if the English battle cruisers had not been too gentlemanly to violate international law," is " convinced that when the judicious historian reviews the war and its consequences, he will say that the passage of the Straits by these German ships scaled the doom of the Turkish Empire." Even at the time there were statesmen in the Turkish Cabinet who perceived this, but brute force over-ruled their apprehensions and the whole Turkish nation has been made

astic methods of dealing with enemy aliens are recommended by a committee appointed by the Prime Minister to enquire into the problem of alien enemies. The recommendations are as follows:—

Adult Male Enemy Aliens.—Every male enemy alien over eighteen yeers of age should be interned forthwith, unless there is a definite national or medical reason for exemption. The definite national reason for exemption should in each case be clearly stated by a central controlling authority, and be made available for public informa-tion. Male enemy aliens exempted from internment by reason of ill-health should be medically certified by three doctors nominated by a central controlling authority. Alien women of enemy origin, except those whose husbands have been granted exemption from internment, shall, as far as is practicable, be re-patriated. In certain cases it may be necessary to consider the alternative of internment, while in other cases justice and humanity may dictate exemption from both these courses.

An certineates of naturalisation granted to enemy aliens since January 1, 1914 (the date of the coming into force of the German Imperial and State Nationality Law), shall be referred for view to the advisory committee presided over by Mr. Justice Sankey and Mr. Justice Younger, and cancelled, unless, in the opinion of such committee, there are national reasons to the contrary.

In all cases of existing certificates of naturalisation granted to enemy aliens naturalisation granted to enemy aliens prior to January 1, 1915, where prima facie evid-nce is forthcoming from any responsible persons questioning the loyalty or goodwill of the holder of a certificate, the central controlling authority shall refer such case cases to an advisory committee for inquiry and report, and where an advisory committee is satisfied that the continuance of a naturalisation certificate is contrary to the public good, such certificate shall be cancelled.

Neutral Naturalisation Certificates. A review shall be made naturalisation certificates granted to subjects of neutral nations since August 1, 1914.

There should be the closest examination into the conduct and associations of all persons of enemy origin who have become naturalised subjects of neutral or Allied States since August until that date. 1, 1914, and are resident, or occasionally recident, in this country.

All persons, male or female, or enemy origin employed in any Government office or department shall be discharged forthwith.

All persons of enemy origin or association shall be removed forthwith from all prohibited areas, any exception this rule to be on medical grunds only certified by three doctors nominated by the central controlling au-

The granting of passes by the police or other authority to persons of enemy origin or association to visit prohibited areas shall be discontinued forthwith, and all passes of this character at present in the possession of such persons shall be cancelled.

All changes of name since August 1, 1914, by persons of enemy origin shall be made inoperative until six months after the signing of peace, and no changes of name on the part of persons of enemy origin shall be permitted

Instructions should be issued by the Board of Trade ordering the windingup of all enemy businesses to be com-pleted within a period of three months, or such extended period as shall, for special reasons, be authorised by the Board of Trade.

Under the Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1916, winding-up orders of all branches or agencies in this country of enemy banks shall forthwith be made by the Board of Trade.

We recommend the immediate issue of new and uniform regulations concerning the administration of all internment camps, more especially with regard to rationing and to tronsport of interned persons to and from the camps. We also suggest the revision of the regulations under which inmates of internment camps are granted leave and permitted to receive visitors. Stricter supervision than at present exists should be ex reised over the movement on shore of neutrals employed in all shops calling at British ports, and instructions should be issued prohibiting unauthorised persons boarding vessels during their stay in this country.

Safety of the Realm.

The committee state :-Though much justifiable public anxiety exists concerning the freedom still permitted in this country to persons of enemy origin, we desire to re-cord our belief that any wheelesaic change of treason against such realm is warranted, and to state that in arriving at the recommendations set forth we have been guided solely by the predominant consideration of the safety of the realm in a time of war. We would venture to express the opinion that one of the causes contributing to the present alien situation is the most of co-ordination between the departments.

invarying degree share in the enforcement of the law. It is only fair to add that the departments concerned have been handicapped in their administra-tion by the absence of a clearly defined policy in the part of his Majesty's Government on many phases of this delicate and complex problem.

It is therefore worthy of consideration whether the responsibility for the control of aliens during the war should not be placed in charge of one individual (conceivably the Parliamentary Secretary to the Home Office) who should be chairman of an inter-departmental committe co-ordinating the activities of the various departments concerned, and the same time be directly responsible to the Home Secretary and the House of Commons for the a ministration of a uniform and clarify defined Government policy. We also deem it our duty to suggest that in arriving at decisions concerning that in arriving at decisions concerning natural sed enemy aliens his Majesty's Government should not ignore the provisions of the German Imperial and State NY onality Law of July 22, 1913 (Pan Poentary Paper Cd. 7277), which enact the follows:—"A person does not loss in mationality if, before acquiring a foreign nationality, he has applied for, and received, the written permission of the competent authorities of his home State to retain his nationality." nationality.'
