Handwritten text in Burmese script, likely a historical document or manuscript. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines across the page. The script is cursive and characteristic of traditional Burmese writing. The document appears to be a record or a list, possibly related to land or administrative matters, given the use of terms like 'ကွက်' (kwaik, meaning 'section' or 'plot') and 'အကျယ်' (akayay, meaning 'area' or 'extent'). The text is written on aged, slightly discolored paper.

Handwritten Burmese script on aged paper, likely a manuscript or historical document. The text is arranged in several columns, written in a cursive style characteristic of traditional Burmese calligraphy. The ink is dark brown, and the paper shows signs of wear, including creases and discoloration.

Handwritten Burmese script on aged paper, organized into four vertical columns. The text is written in a cursive style characteristic of traditional Burmese manuscripts. The paper shows signs of age, including yellowing and two distinct dark circular spots. The script is densely packed across the columns, with some characters appearing to be in a different script or dialect, possibly related to the Shan or Karen languages, given the context of historical Burmese records.
