Shaft that Pierced the Kaiser's Attitude.

The inflexible determination of the Allies to have no dealings with the perfidious Hohenzollerns, and the morbid terms in which this inexorable determination was expressed in President Wilson's reply to the Papal Peace Note, have at last penetrated the thick armour of the Kaiser's colossal self-conceit.

It has taken a long time for William to realise that this denunciation of a monarch's shamelessness and dishonour could possibly be meant for his Imperial and Royal Majesty the German Emperor and King of Prussia, but it has been brought home to him at last, and, in the characteristic Kaiser manner, he has ordered a counterblast to be published far and wide in the German Press.

"Trust Your Emperor!"

It takes the form of a sort of proclamation, printed in extremely large English type, the German text being wholly abandoned on an occasion of such vital importance. It runs as follows, and it is understood to have come direct from the royal and imperial hand:—

Only the coming centuries will clearly grasp all the mighty deeds that Germany has performed in the teeth of a world of enemies.

So far as human prescience can tell those enemies will never overthrow us. This they see for themselves. Hence their latest dirty and unspeakably contemptible attempt to cause disunion and weakness among our people, to enfeeble the strong and invincible force so that at last he may be cast down and crushed.

For heaven's sake let us sink our political differences and remain closely united. No German must accept a gift from the dastard enemy, even though it be freedom, popular rights, or whatever it be called. In war time we must do precisely the contrary to that which the enemy desires us to do, and if he expresses a false wish for our democratisation we must, to spite him, elude all the stronger to our well-tried German imperial institutions.

The German people must have no other answer ready for the Wilsons and all his treacherous brood of amiable advisers—those despicable hypocrites whose real desire is to dig our graves—than that never, though we be at our last gasp, shall we accept the proffered hand of liars and traitors who desire not our freedom, but our eternal enslavement.

New Test of Death.

A discovery of great value for testing with certainty whether a person is dead has been made by Dr. Shiro Tashiro, Professor of Physiology at Chicago University. As described in the Lancet, it is too technical for the layman's understanding but a doctor explains that the test is made by crushing a piece of muscle and comparing it with a piece of uncrushed muscle. If the person is alive the crushed piece gives off more carbonic acid than the uncrushed piece, as a result of the stimulation produced by the injury. Dr. Tashiro claims that this test can be applied within a few minutes, or at most within one or two hours of death.

There are, of course, other tests with which every doctor is quite satisfied, but this will be extremely valuable as proving local death of the tissues after general death has occurred. There is life in the tissues for some time after death, and proof of their death sets doubts all doubts at rest.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1917.

GERMANY'S DETERIORATING RESERVES.

A German journalist, who has had the good fortune to escape from Germany, has written to The Times a very startling article in which he depicts with graphic pen the conditions prevailing in that country to-day. He declares that the fourth winter of the war will bring with it a most serious deterioration of the German military position and he ascribes this to three causes. The first is the lack of raw materials for the manufacture of necessary munitions of war which has been brought about by the British blockade and by the more stringent control of exports from neutral countries. The second is the failure of submarine warfare the results of which will grow steadily worse as the winter progresses. Already the joyous hopes of the speedy overthrow of England by this means which the German people entertained at the beginning of the campaign of ruthlessness have given place to a melancholy resignation which, in the present domestic condition of the country, is extremely dangerous. The third and most important cause is the marked deterioration of the quality of the reserves. Although the excellence of German surgery has resulted in the recovery of a large proportion of the wounded and in spite of the fact that the Land-sturm men of over 45 have been everywhere called up and notwithstanding the fact that the frontier guards have been largely replaced by civilians, it remains undeniable that the military standard cannot be maintained and the writer of the article above mentioned ascribes this to the political infection which the young classes drafted into the forces bring with them. The political progress which the youth of Germany has made during the war is described as intense in spite of the almost incredible efforts of the police and military authorities to restrain it. The Centre Clerical Party has opposed this political dragging of the youth of the land with extraordinary vehemence for it foresees the imperilling of its many organisation for the young. Lads of seventeen who have just become liable for Landsturm duties are called up for military service at once although the whole of public opinion is opposed to this procedure. The boys have carried on a propaganda of open refusal to serve and of desertion. The number of desertions increases daily and it is claimed that there are several organisations in existence for rendering aid and providing refuge for deserters who are being hunted down. The distrust of the Army authorities for these young reserves is such that, for purely political reasons, the oldest are mixed with the youngest classes in the garrisons. The degree of fitness required is reduced to a minimum and the training period is made as short as possible in order to withdraw the lads as soon as possible from the politically infected soil of the home country. Thus the time allowed for infantry training is but four weeks with a maximum of six weeks for artillery and the units are then sent into the communication regions so that they may be employed in endangered positions as occasion requires. The writer of the article referred to thus comes to the following conclusions: "The military Colossus of the Central States, whose whole existence is based on the continuation of its blood and iron tradition, is confronted with the capitulation of the new generation in Germany. This new generation has nothing more in common with the war, and it is certain with her surviving remnant of deluded veterans Germany will never win this war."

ENERGETIC preparations are being made in Holland to receive and accommodate 16,000 British and German prisoners of war. Many will be housed at Scheveningen (a seaside resort near The Hague). The Y. M. C. A. is establishing canteens and clubs for the benefit of the prisoners.

Court Circular.

GRAND PALACE,

Thursday, November 8.

This afternoon, at Baisai Hall, a Special Meeting of the Privy Council was held at which His Majesty the King presided.

Official Communique.

In view of the extraordinary inundation of this year, His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to appoint a Royal Commission composed of the Ministers of Finance, Interior, Agriculture and Local Government to take up and consider the necessary measures for the relief of the sufferers as had been done in former times when the people have suffered either through such calamities as inundation or drought.

Measures of relief will be further notified by proclamation as soon as the Royal Commission has arrived at the result of its deliberation.

Meanwhile immediate measures to relieve the sufferers have already been undertaken where urgent distress exists.

The Court.

We understand that His Majesty the King will leave for Rajaburi on Sunday on a brief visit to view the damage done by the floods in the Rajaburi Circle.

This was aggravated towards evening when negotiations with a view of democratically strengthening the General Staff was broken off when it was learnt that the Governor during the night had summoned troops from the environs and had ordered these troops to disobe the Government.

The situation is complicated by Kerensky's suspension of three Maximalist and two Conservative newspapers.

It is authoritatively stated that at five in the afternoon the disconnection of bridges between the working class quarters and the centre of the Capital was ordered, thereby stopping also the tramways. The City is guarded by loyal troops.

The Royal Railway Department.

Annual Report on the Southern Line.

We have received from H. R. H. the Commissioner-General, Royal State Railways, a copy of Mr. Henry Gittins report on the Southern Line for the year 2459 (April 1, 1916 to March 31, 1917). The following extracts from the report make interesting reading:—

Length of Line.

The total length of line opened for Traffic amounts to Kms. 1083 an increase of K 287 over the preceding year. This increase is due to the opening of the Section Bangkok-Yai to Ban Na, the completion of which gives through connection from Bangkok to Trang, Nakhon Sri Thammaraj and Singora. In addition to the above there are Kms. 534 laid in Sidings.

Communication has also been established and traffic trains run 2 days a week between Ootapao and Na Pradu on the Patani Line, a length of Kms. 91, but this section has not yet been finally handed over to open line.

Financial Statement.

The Gross Earnings from all sources amounted to Tcs. 2,083,535 as compared with Tcs. 1,326,429 for the previous year. This represents an increase of Tcs. 557,106, or 36 per cent.

Compared with the Budget the Gross Revenue works out as follows:—
Actual Receipts ... Tcs. 2,083,535
Budget 1,845,000

Excess over Budget Tcs. 238,535

The Gross Working Expenses amounted to Tcs. 1,154,810 as compared with Tcs. 919,387 for the previous year, showing an increase of Tcs. 235,423 or 25 per cent.

Compared with the Budget the Expenditure is as follows:—

Budget ... Tcs. 1,423,527
Actual Expenditure ... 1,154,810
Saving on Budget ... Tcs. 268,717

The Net Dividend earned after deducting contribution to the Renewal Fund amounts to 1.51 per cent, as against 1.27 per cent, for the previous year.

The increase in the average length of line open is 48.0 per cent.
Do. in receipts ... 36.5 per cent.
Do. in working expenses ... 25.6 per cent.

The percentage of working expenses to gross receipts works out at 55.48 per cent as against 60.23 per cent, for last year.

General Remarks.

The total number of passengers carried numbered 11,661,111. Of this number the Bangkok-Petchaburi line accounted for 1,100,945 and the line South of Petchaburi for 560,166. The figures for the preceding year were 1,007,086 and 343,153 respectively. The total increase in passengers was 310,872 or 23 per cent. This was due, to increased length of line opened to Traffic; to a slight general improvement all round; and to the Military Manoeuvres held in March.

First and second class passengers show an increase of 2,610 and 5,407 respectively.

Goods Traffic shows an increase of Tons 17,048 or 13 per cent. The total quantity carried being Tons 145,692, of this amount the Bangkok-Petchaburi line accounted for Tons. 80,376 and the line South for Tons 65,316—as against Tons. 75,932 and Tons 52,712 respectively for the year previously.

Of the principal articles carried there have been notable increases in Beans, Dyeing Nuts, Packages, Rice, and Tin, and decreases in Fish, Paddy, Stone and Timber.

Transport of Live Stock totalled 38,137 head, an increase of 18,757 on the previous year's figures.

Average receipts per Km. of line open amounted to Tcs. 2,137 and the expenses to Tcs. 1,184, as against Tcs. 2,316 and Tcs. 1,395 for the previous year.

The gross receipts per Km. show a falling off of Tcs. 179 on the last year's report. This is entirely due to the lines opened during the year traversing a poorly populated district. As some compensation for this reduction of Tcs. 251 per Km. has been made in the working expenses.

The net receipts per Km. show an increase of Tcs. 32.

Army manoeuvres took place on a large scale during the month of March in the district of Ratburi. In connection with this 41 special trains were run and a large number of troops, with their full equipment of guns, horses, etc., carried.

Some strain was put upon the Department to supply the necessary rolling stock for this and considerable extra work developed upon the Traffic Staff. By gathering in all the available stock from the Southern Sections the scarcity of the stock difficulty was overcome, and the assistance given by the railway branch of the Army Department in the handling of the troops at the Railway Stations helped greatly to the satisfactory carrying out of the work.

Floods and Wash Outs.

In November and December 1916 the District South of Tung Song was subjected to very high floods, in some places greater, and in others slightly less than what was said to be the record flood of 1915.

Traffic was stopped on the Nakon branch for 1 day and Tung Song to Singora for 3 days.

Slips also occurred to the new banks in the districts of Chumphon and these caused interruption to the Traffic for 15 days.

Engineering Ways and Works.

The permanent way has been maintained in good running order and the following works have been carried out, practically all of which are between Bangkok and Petchaburi.

About cbsm. 23,571 of Earthwork have been executed in the making up of embankments and level crossings, and cbsm. 2,593 in new platforms and sidings.

A total amount of cbsm. 8,352 of stone ballast has been put into the line. Owing to the large rush of water through the timber bridge at K. 81,640 it has been decided to replace this with a steel bridge of 7 spans of 12 m. each. The foundation work for this has been started.

The new station at Petchaburi has been completed and opened for Traffic on February 1st, 1917.

The water supply has been completed at Petchaburi.

The water supply at Ratburi is being altered and extended and a new tank is in course of erection.

Locomotives.

No new locomotives were added to the stock during the year under review, the total number remaining at 37. About one-third of this number continued to be used in connection with the construction and maintenance of the line, leaving only twenty-four for the working of Open line Traffic.

An order for five locomotives of the 4.60 type was placed with the North British Co.

Eleven engines were thoroughly repaired during the year. This includes repairs to engines which had been used in connection with the construction of the Railway.

Coal was purchased in considerable quantities owing to the partial failure of the firewood supply. This accounts to some extent for the large increase in the cost of fuel.

IN STOCK.Siam Import Co., Ltd.*Sikak Phya Sri-City.*Admiralty Policy.*Naval And Mercantile Measures.

London, Nov. 1.—Sir Eric Geddes' maiden speech in the House of Commons this afternoon was the occasion of a long and important statement in which he reviewed the naval situation and said that the present Board of Admiralty consisted of eight naval officers and three civilians including himself, but it was intended to include an additional civil lord. The Board is grouped to include the formal committees, namely the operations committee and the maintenance committee and Sir E. Geddes described their specific functions. The Board and committee meet at least once a week and other sub-committees are formed as necessary. These and other changes in procedure are intended to improve the organisation and control exercised by the Board.

Special measures have been taken to increase the power and strengthen the control of the naval staff in planning operations. A new section has been added to the operations side of the naval staff, consisting of younger officers with recent experience in the Grand Fleet, under a flag officer who has left the Grand Fleet to take up the position. It is thus hoped to add to the ripe and valuable experience of long service and indispensable Admiralty officers the latest up-to-date knowledge of naval warfare in its ever changing aspects. Sir E. Geddes anticipated a great advantage from the fact that the naval staff will be in increasing personal touch with the Grand Fleet and other naval commands.

What shipping we have lost.

Sir E. Geddes next dealt with the question of the desirability of publishing the tonnage of British mercantile vessels which were sunk owing to enemy action. He stated that the tonnage figures published by the enemy led to the conclusion that the enemy did not know what was being sunk, but would very much like to obtain such information as periodic publication would afford. He therefore considered that sufficient justification existed not to publish the tonnage. He, however, was able to supplement Mr. Lloyd George's information which shows that we are making reasonably satisfactory progress in overcoming the submarine menace.

He prefaced the quotation of "certain figures" by explaining and justifying the transfer of men and material from one branch of war industry to another, whether naval, military, or aircraft, on the ground of concentrating activity as circumstances demanded.

Since the beginning of the war between forty and fifty per cent of the enemy submarines, operating in the North Sea and Atlantic and Arctic oceans, had been sunk. The enemy in the last quarter had lost as many submarines as during the whole of 1916. He confidently asked the House if that was not a satisfactory record for the navy and mercantile marine.

Inaccurate German Figures.

The Germans claimed to have sunk 808,000 tons of all nationalities during last August. They had sunk little more than one third of that amount of British tonnage, and little more than half for all nationalities. The German September figures were 672,000 tons; but they sunk far less than one half that amount of all nationalities. Dealing with the German claim that our tonnage was so diminishing that there were not enough ships on the sea to enable the submarines to maintain their bag, Sir E. Geddes pointed out that during last April, which was the heaviest month of British losses, our trade presumably flowed satisfactorily for the enemy.

Last September which was the enemy's lowest month of sinkings, our overseas sailings of all ships over 1,600 tons were twenty per cent in numbers, and thirty per cent in tonnage, higher than in April. The real reason why the enemy's harvest is poorer is because the long arm of the British navy has reached down into the depths. The British losses through submarine have steadily decreased since April, and latterly, markedly. September, was most satisfactory. October was only slightly worse than September, and was thirty per cent better than any other month since unrestricted warfare began.

Total Loss for The War.

The net reduction in tonnage in the last four months is to-day thirty per centum less than was estimated early in July. The total net reduction since the beginning of the war from all causes in British ships, over sixteen hundred tons, is under 2½ million tons gross, or fourteen per centum. Notwithstanding the diversion of labour and material from the mercantile service, the shipbuilding resources of the country can again be devoted to building up a mercantile marine, since the submarine menace is at present doing less damage.

After summarising the progress made in combating the submarine menace, Sir E. Geddes referred to the statement that the Germans were building submarines faster than hitherto, and that they had not yet attained the maximum strength of submarine warfare. Therefore it was becoming a test of determination, grit and ingenuity between the two contending forces. He concluded by saying that the submarine warfare is at present going well for us, and that one is justified in regarding the future with courage and confidence. He recalled that the German mercantile marine before the war totalled 5,000,000 tons, but to-day nearly half had been sunk, or was in the Entente's hands.

He reminded the public that we have to consider the situation of the alliance as well as ourselves. He strongly impressed on the House that the greatest economy in food and all imports was necessary, in order that we may be enabled to supply coal and other needs to Italy and France. We must lay plans for a long war. He saw no signs of its being a short one. We must also be ready to provide shipping for maintaining and transporting the huge army which America is preparing. Regarding the merchant ship construction, Sir Eric said notwithstanding the huge munitions production and the reduction to a minimum of manpower in 1917 we shall have produced naval and mercantile tonnage practically equal to the best year ever recorded in our history, and in 1918 it will certainly be very much greater.

More Merchant Ships.

The output of merchant shipbuilding was now being expedited. The responsibility for the programme of naval and mercantile marine was under Admiralty control in order to avoid clashing between the vital interests of each. The speaker detailed elaborate plans for grappling with shipbuilding problems in the most effective manner and said it had been decided that at least four new national yards were necessary in order to make use of the material and labour which had been collected.

The output of merchant tonnage for the first nine months of 1917 was 123 per cent. higher than in the corresponding period of last year, and very considerably higher than the output for the whole of 1915. Standard vessels now ordered represented nearly a million gross tons, shipping. Over half of these are already being constructed and the remainder would be taken in hand as soon as the vessels now on the stocks were launched. A limited number of standard vessels had been completed and commissioned but the whole of the yards suitable for building standard ships could not yet be entirely devoted to that purpose because the stocks were occupied by other craft.

The programme of warship construction now in hand was infinitely larger than had ever been undertaken in the pre-war history of the country. The output of naval craft in the last twelve months was three to four times as great as the average annual output for the few years preceding the war.

The Convoy—and Riga.

Sir Eric dealing with the recent loss of the convoy near the Shetlands said that by a concatenation of circumstances the three sets of wireless were all put out of action at once and no news of the action reached the admiral till the surviving ships arrived at Berwick. After fullest consultation the Admiralty were satisfied that the best possible dispositions had been made and much as the loss of life was regretted it was a legitimate risk of war.

Replying to criticisms of the Navy for not sending a fleet into the Baltic to assist the Russians, Sir Eric said the matter was best dealt with by a study of the German naval operations in the Gulf of Riga, because the measures which would be necessary for the British entering the Baltic would be obviously somewhat similar to those adopted by the Germans in entering the Gulf of Riga. The Germans assembled a considerable proportion of their high seas fleet with a large force of attendant cruisers, destroyers, submarines, and mine sweepers, and escort vessels, together with a large force of troops, in transports, at some point within reach of the Gulf of Riga.

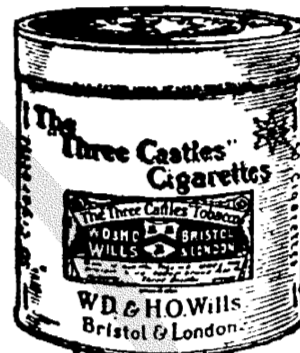

British Ban on Silk Raised.

The Tokio Foreign Department recently announced receipt of a telegram from Viscount Chinda, Ambassador to London, saying that the British Government has decided to abolish the restriction on imports of Japanese silk textiles (hitherto only 50 per cent. of the total export in 1916 of Japanese silk textiles to Great Britain has been permitted). Great Britain has been receiving supplies of silk textiles from Italy and Switzerland, but since the outbreak of war, supplies from these countries have fallen off considerably, and of late the shortage has been made up by shipments from France. For some time, exports of silk goods to Great Britain were prohibited as luxuries, but some time after, imports from Japan were allowed to the extent of one-half of last year's total. Of late, the demand for silk goods has increased considerably in England owing to the greatly increased earnings of the working classes. Such being the case, the price of silk has advanced rapidly in England, and therefore the British Government has decided to discontinue the restrictions on imports of Japanese silk.

The Western Fight.

London, Oct. 31.—French communiqué: North of the Aisne the artillery struggle proceeded, on the whole Vauxhall Pinon sector and our new positions in the region of Froimont. Enemy aeroplanes dropped thirty bombs on Dunkirk at present no casualties and no damage are reported.

London, Nov. 1.—A French communiqué says: Our offensive between October 23-27 yielded 11,137 prisoners, including 237 officers and 180 guns. Between the Meuse and Bezonvaux there was a fairly lively bombardment. Our aeroplanes bombed railway stations at Thionville, Bettenbourg, Mezières, Longueville, Welpply and Luxembourg. All objectives were hit.

London, Oct. 31.—Field Marshal Haig: Hostile artillery was active at night against the positions captured yesterday. There were no counter-attacks.

London, Oct. 31.—Wireless German Official: In addition to the main attack the English yesterday attempted an advance on Gheluvelt which was driven back. Our movements in the Carnic Alps continue in accordance with plan.

London, Oct. 31.—Renter's correspondent at Headquarters says there was holierous weather yesterday afternoon, which rendered infantry work practically impossible. The troops were content in consolidating the morning gains, which were substantial and important. On the left of the attack the Naval Brigade and the London Territorials struggled against well-nigh impossible weather odds. Consequently they did not advance quite as successfully as the Canadians on the higher and better ground. The Canadians thoroughly recognise that the home troops had the harder task and loudly praise their indomitability.

As an example of the bitter price the Germans are paying for their desperate defence of Passchendaele ridge system, the correspondent mentions that it has been ascertained that a company of reserve infantry went in eighty strong and came out with only one officer and four of other ranks not wounded. In another case a battalion of Grenadiers after concluding a spell of duty had only the adjutant and one man left.

Such examples could be multiplied. The correspondent gives another interesting insight into German mentality. In the course of conversation a captured enemy officer after saying that the breaking of Belgian neutrality was justified by necessity, added that his countrymen could not understand now that the United States had entered the war and we had nothing more to fear why the Allies refuse to take advantage of the comparatively easy passage of the Rhine which the invasion of Holland would offer.

The Gravel Trouble.

Amsterdam, Nov. 1.—The Telegraaf publishes details of the utilisation of the sand and gravel transported on Dutch waterways from Germany to Belgium. The cobble road from Middelkerke to the west was broken up and smoothed with sand and gravel from Westende. The Germans have broken up the tramlines everywhere in Belgium to construct new light railways at the front, employing deported civilians in transporting the material. Concrete is being manufactured between Bruges and Ostend for the construction of pillboxes while sand and gravel is used along the coast for the construction of aerodromes and coast defences.

Sailors And The War.

The British and Foreign Sailors' Society is celebrating its centenary shortly, and in view of this event hopes to raise £250,000 for the further extension of its work. Founded in the days of Lord Nelson and with Admiral Gambier as its first president the Society has made the welfare of British seamen its first charge throughout the past hundred years. During the progress of the War the Society's institutions in all parts of Great Britain and elsewhere have given shelter, food, and clothing to thousands of men. The crews of torpedoed ships are one of its first charges, and most grateful thanks have been received by the Society from owners, officers and men. Relief is dispensed to hundreds of seamen or their dependents suffering through the War, and nearly one thousand sailors who are Prisoners of War receive food parcels at a cost of more than £500 per week. Suitable literature is distributed to men of the Naval Auxiliary fleet, transports, mine sweepers, patrol boats, lighthouses, &c. The Society's King Edward VII. Nautical School has trained lads for the merchant service, and over 4,000 have received their Board of Trade certificates at the School. The centenary fund will enable this school to be extended. Centenary subscriptions may be sent to Sir Frederick Green, J. P. Sailors' Palace, Commercial Road, E 14.

London, Oct. 31.—The Press Bureau states: The Ministry of Munitions is inviting owners of tin and tungsten mines in Cornwall and Devon to establish a Research Association with a view to conducting experiments under first class experts to increase their output. It is pointed out that 35 per cent of tin and a higher percentage of wolfram in the ore has hitherto been lost. A conference on the subject has been convened for Nov. 7.
